Data Subject Rights

Data erasure happens on a rolling daily basis for clean email. The Customer can choose to make data invisible, without however taking it off from Symantec's systems before their expiry date indicated below. The Customer can also change certain configuration settings so that data related to Customer directed screenings is not collected or retained. The Customer has full access to any stored data throughout their subscription period to service any data subject requests.

Personal Data Retention Schedule

Suspected spam is quarantined for 14 days, unless the Customer configures the Product to drop spam emails right away. Suspected malware is quarantined for 30 days. Email metadata and Customer-directed screening results are stored in the central database in the Management System for 30 days, and deleted on a rolling basis upon their expiry date, unless the Customer configures the Product not to store the results of directed screening. Dashboard reporting data is available for 40 days for detailed information and 12 months for summary information. Network activity logs are stored for 1 year to facilitate service usage traceability and potential dispute resolution. We will continue to provide service for 30 days after a customer's subscription ends as part of a grace period. After service termination, there is a 30 day grace period that the service will be provided. Customer configuration data is stored for another 60 days, to facilitate service resumption if the Customer chooses to return.
